

Middle Eastern education officials at Sunway College

TWELVE senior officials from the Middle East visited Sunway College in Petaling Jaya recently to get acquainted with Malaysia's private education system.

The officials represented the Middle East's Education Ministry and its institutions of higher learning.

Sunway College, chosen as an exemplary private institution by the Malaysia's Education Ministry, held an 'open day' of sorts for the visitors to gain insight into the college's courses and facilities and to increase awareness about the Malaysian higher education in the Middle East countries.

The officials, led by Mottahar Mohamed Yahya, the Yemen vice-minister of Higher Education and Scientific Research, toured the college and later attended a briefing by college principal Elizabeth Lee. Also present were college deputy chairman Tan Sri Ramon Navaratnam and its director Lee Weng Keng.
