

A GREAT FEELING...Sunway students recently became "big brothers and sisters" to some 30 children from Rumah Ozanam. The event was aimed at instilling a sense of duty in the graduating students.

Charity work part of Sunway's course

AN act of charity helped 54 Sunway College students graduate from the School of Hospitality and Tourism Management recently.

As part of the Diploma in Hotel Catering and Management assessment module in the "Meeting, Events and Conventions" course, Sunway students spent a day with 30 children from Rumah Ozanam and the Compassion Home.

Each child was paired with a big 'brother' or 'sister' and were given the opportunity to make muffins in the kitchen and also learn napkin folding techniques.

The day ended with the children taking home presents from the sponsors as well as the students.

Preparations for the event started as early as February when the students, together with the support of the school, decided to play a role in helping charity homes.

"Besides instilling a sense of duty to the community, the charity event was also aimed at exposing the students to event management," said Mae Tan, director of the School of Hospitality and Tourism Management.

The event was sponsored by Pillsbury, Nestle and Pastry Pro. Students' parents also chipped-in to make the event a success.

Proceeds in the form of cash and gifts went to the charity homes. Elizabeth Vaz and Jasmine Woon-Ooi received the contributions on behalf of Rumah Ozanam and Compassion Home respectively.

Present were Puan Sri Susan Cheah, executive director of the Sunway Group as well as heads of schools and departments from Sunway College.
