Sunway College wins human resources award

By JESWANT KAUR

UNWAY College has been awarded the Human Resources Minister Award for its contributions and achievements in human resources development in the country. Evaluation of a recipient is based on performance in human resources development undertaken by employers throughout last year.

The award was presented by Human Resources Deputy Minister Datuk Dr Abdul Latiff Ahmad to Sunway College director Lee Weng Keng.

Said Lee: "We are proud to receive this award as it recognises the importance we place in providing human resources training and development in the college."

He added that the college has in place a training and development policy that encourages, nurtures and explores each employee's hidden potential and talent. It helps them discover their innate abilities, enabling them to improve productivity and quality of work.

Lee said the college also plans, formulates and publishes a yearly training calendar for both the academic and administrative staff, which helps encourage employees to participate in programmes that best suit their needs.

"Teachers' enhancement programmes, soft skills and information technology skills are conducted regularly for the benefit of the staff. We strive to continuously improve our employees' competency by conducting, training and enhancement programmes at all levels. We believe in producing homegrown employees for retention and growth, as this is the key to staying ahead," he added.
