Helping students make right career decisions

A SERIES of 12 topics that will help students decide on opportunities in higher education was presented at Sunway College's Open Day recently.

There were free testing services to enable students gauge their capabilities in English and in choosing suitable careers.

Visitors had a guided tour of the college, walking through an exhibition that showcased Sunway's courses and facilities.

"These Open Days which the college have had over the years are aimed at offering students options in higher education and guide them to the right choices," said Sunway College vice-principal Elizabeth Lee.

Among the talks held during the Open Day were "Educational Opportunities after SPM" and "Studies in Australia, New Zealand, United Kingdom and America".

Sessions on various subjects offered at Sunway College were also held and they covered subjects like communications, accountancy, law, marketing, information technology/computer studies, engineering, medicine and surveying.

A session on the certificate diploma courses in hospitality management studies was held at the training restaurant where the school conducted demonstrations for visitors.

Academic advisors were also on hand to answer queries from interested students and concerned parents.

Other activities for the day included talks on the newly established Monash University Sunway Campus Malaysia, career testing sessions and English proficiency tests.
