

Showing they care for creation

SIXTY students from Sunway College combined their talents and creativity to successfully stage their Caring For Creation Charity Concert last Friday.

The fund-raising concert, held at Sunway Lagoon's Amphitheatre, showcased the students from various fields of study who pooled their talents and creativity to dazzle the audiences with their dance, singing, drama, martial arts and musical repertoires.

The show kicked off with a modern dance performance by the group Zouke and was followed by a vocal solo by Corrine Chin and an acappella of the song So Much In Love before the Buddhist Society enthralled guests with their Fung Xian drama and song rendition.

Then came quite impressive instrumental piece on strings performed by Classic Assemble, a group comprising of music major students. This was followed by an energetic martial arts demonstration by Sunway's Ninjitsu Club.

After the break the concert resumed with an Indian dance routine by the Indian Cultural Society, a mime performance and two more vocal numbers by Sunway College's MADD band which sang I Don't Wanna Talk About It and Sheila Majid's, Sinaran.

The two-hour show culminated in another equally impressive acappella by NRG, also made up of Sunway music students who bade farewell to the crowd with songs like Round The Clock and Hard To

According to Sunway College's head of student services department, Lee Siok Ping this year's charitable activity is in conjunction with Caring For Creation campaign launched by the minister of National Unity and Social Development, Datin Paduka Zaleha Ismail last month.

"The students are coming together to share their time, energy and talents to show that they, our future leaders, care about the less fortunate," she said at the concert.

The students have been raising funds throughout the one-month campaign with ticket collections, funfairs, food-fares, washing cars and during the concert, ushers were passed around donation buckets among the guests present.

The Caring For Creation charity concert hopes to raise at least RM5,000.
