SEVERAL measures have been put in place to ensure a safe and healthy campus and environment for all students to study, live and play in, said Elizabeth Lee, Sunway Education Group CEO.

"We will totally discourage those who display symptoms of ill health from participating in any campus activities," she said.

"This could jeopardise their own wellbeing further and affect the wellbeing of other students and staff," she added.

"We are in direct contact with each of our international students from China to commit themselves to quarantine for health reasons for the duration, as advised by medical authorities, on their return and arrival in Malaysia," she said.

The students' learning is of importance and those who are unable to come on campus for classes will be dealt with separately to ensure that their studies will not be adversely affected during their absence from formal classes, she added.

"They will be welcomed back onto the campus and into classes after they may advise and direct them to the relevant lectures and assignment tasks which students can review and complete while away from campus," she said.

"The Taylor’s Lakeside Campus is actively monitoring the situation in compliance with Malaysia’s Health Ministry," the university said.

"We provide the latest updates about the outbreak and commencement of precautions to reduce the risk," UTAR said.

"The Students’ Affairs and Alumni Services department is closely monitoring the situation and taking necessary precautions to ensure the safety of its staff and students on campus," the university said.

"The university will be contrasting and closely monitoring the condition daily," said Heriot-Watt University Malaysia provost and CEO Prof Mushtak Al-Atabi.

"Those staff who return from China will be returning after the period," she said.

"We have formed strong relationships with the China partner universities," she said.

Once travelling is permissible, she said health screenings at its MSU Medical Centre Specialist Hospital will be more compulsory for all students from China.

"All students and staff who have returned from China are currently in Malaysia, except for two who plan to come back soon," she said.

"We have formed strong relationships with the China partner universities," she said.

"If and when students return from China, they are required to impose self-quarantine for 14 days," she said.
