4th convention for accountants

THE Chartered Association of Certified Accountants was urged to fully utilise the fourth ACCA Convention with Sunway College's RM16,000 contribution to the event.

The cheque was presented by Sunway College executive director Tan Sri Ramon Navaratnam to the ACCA Malaysia vice-president William Arul at the Sunway college auditorium recently.

Present at the cheque presentation were ACCA regional executive secretary Sally Toh, ACCA Students Ambassadors president Barbara Er, Sunway College director Lim Weng Keng and Sunway College financial courses consultant Teo Ee Seng.

The convention organised by the ACCA Student Ambassadors, was held for two days from Sept 6 to 8.

The convention saw ACCA lecturers, graduates, accountants and students working together in a joint effort.

The only of its kind in the accountancy profession, the convention provided an opportunity for the participants to go through the development programmes that are specially tailor-made to suit their needs and to equip them with the knowledge to face the challenges of Malaysia's fast developing economy.

The event saw more than 130 ACCA Convention participants from all over the country at Fraser's Hill.

Included in the programme were team-building and self-awareness sessions.

The activities were also planned to further enhance the inter-personal and interaction skills of the participants.

According to Teo, the programme was organised to develop interaction among qualified accountants.

"Our culture is naturally very quiet and this convention will help prepare the graduates, students or anyone who attend the programme to be more confident in their profession."
