Career month benefit

SUNWAY COLLEGE's Career Month gave the public and some 4,000 students a chance to learn about options available in tertiary education.

Held for the second consecutive year, the recent month-long event had professionals from various fields talk about their jobs and challenges.

College vice-principal Elizabeth Lee said its Student Services Department is dedicated to helping students develop personal skills to complement their academic and intellectual growth.

is happy about achieving their objectives of organising the career talks.

"We were able to counsel and help students, especially those in pre-university, to wisely choose a field of study relevant to their abilities, interests and future career," said department head Lee Siok Ping

She said feedback from students has been positive and will help the college in planning Career Month '96.
